PREFATORY NOTE.

---

THIS little manual needs but a brief explanation of its appearance. Who was Cæsar? Who were the Gauls? Why did Cæsar subdue them? What kind of a soldier was he? How did Vergil look? What sort of a man was he? What kind of hexameter did he write? What did Cicero make all this fuss about? Who was this man, Catiline? was he as bad as Cicero makes him out? How may Cicero's literary style be described?

To many a student in our preparatory schools such questions as the foregoing are unanswered conundrums till long after he has left the school and entered the college. These pages are designed to tell him, as well as his teacher, where to find the answers in the briefest possible time. It is not meant to belong to the teacher only. Put a copy in the hands of every student; give five minutes in each recitation to the discussion of some point which he has been required to look up with the help of the references given; encourage individual research; and the student will understand, and enjoy Cæsar, Cicero, and Vergil.

No attempt has been made to furnish an exhaustive list of authorities, but rather those most available and useful. Those portions of the three authors mentioned above which are commonly read in most fitting schools are the basis of the references. To cover the whole ground of every course of study is manifestly impracticable. When pages are given, the number refers to the page on which the passage begins. As a rule, the edition referred to in these pages is mentioned only the first time the work is named.

GENERAL AUTHORITIES FOR THE LIFE OF CÆSAR.

I. Original Authorities.

APPIAN, Roman History, Bk. IV.

CÆSAR, Histories of the Gallic War, Civil War, Alexandrine War, African War, and Spanish War. Of these, Cæsar was the author of only seven books on the Gallic War and of the books on the Civil War. Aulus Hirtius undoubtedly wrote the eighth book of the De Bello Gallico, and is supposed to be the author of the whole or part of the rest. Niebuhr thinks that Hirtius wrote the Alexandrine War; Appian, the African war; and some unknown, narrow-minded, uneducated chronicler, the Spanish War. See Niebuhr's Lectures on Roman History, p. 603; also Smith's Dictionary, under Cæsar and Hirtius.

CICERO, Letters, in numerous places. For the thorough study of Cæsar's life from Cicero's letters, an edition of Cicero's works with a complete Index Verborum should be had, like the Paris edition of 1538-39, Apud Rob. Stephanum, "Ex Petri Victorii Codicibus," etc.

DION CASSIUS, Roman History, Bks. 38-40.

FLORUS, Epitome of Roman History, Bk. III., Chap. 10; Bk. IV., Chap. 2.

LIVY (?), Epitome of Roman History.

PLUTARCH, Lives of Eminent Men. The best English translation is that of Clough. Little, Brown, & Co., Boston, 1868. Vol. IV., p. 256. (For Plutarch's authorities, see Peter's Quellen Plutarchs in den Biographien der Römer. Halle, 1865.)

SALLUST (?), Two Epistles to Julius Cæsar, attributed to Sallust. Also Cæsar's speech in the Senate concerning the disposition of the Catilinarian conspirators, Chap. 51 of Sallust's Catiline.

SUETONIUS, Lives of the Cæsars.

VARRO, Fragments.

VELLEIUS PATERCULUS, Compendium of Roman History, Bk. II.

To these authorities might be added the LEGES JULIAE, in the Corpus Juris Civilis. The above original authorities are most easily accessible in the text-editions of Teubner, Leipzig. In Bohn's

Classical Library are translations of Cæsar's complete works, real and reputed; of Sallust, Florus, and Velleius Paterculus, by J. S. Watson; and of Suetonius, by Thomson, revised by T. Forester. For additional editions and translations, see the Bibliographical Clue to Latin Literature, edited (after Hübner), by J. E. B. Mayor (Macmillan); and the Bibliotheca Scriptorum Classicorum, et Graecorum et Latinorum, Wilhelm Engelmann. Leipzig, Wilhelm Engelmann, 1882.

WILLIAMS, The Life of Julius Cæsar. Routledge, London, 1878 (2d ed.).

The above makes no pretension to being a complete list of authorities, but includes some of the more valuable and easily accessible. To these may be added such lives as appear in the editions of Cæsar edited by Allen & Greenough, Kelsey, Harkness, and others; the very excellent life found in Smith's Biographical Dictionary; also the articles on Cæsar in the Encyclopedia Britannica and Appleton's New American Cyclopaedia.
